Dramatic lighting and a wide angle help tie in elements of a Christmas setting, left: a "miracle" storybook, wrapped gifts under an aromatic tree and a couple softly speaking. Carriage, horse and driver, above, wait for passengers by Temple Square at night after a snowfall.

Shows each year attract about 40 entries such as this especially handsome four-wheel carriage passing girls' school originally built around 1850.

Picture-takers have a grand time, snapping past scenes like this in the present—and preserving them for the future. A look at life before autos—and traffic laws. Unconcerned about established routes, riders take carriage over village green.

Probably few movies about old times can match authenticity of this scene: carriage carrying elegantly dressed couple moves slowly by old house and street lamp in Genesee Village. Four-horse team goes into easy trot down village dirt road, giving onlookers pause to wonder what life was like in horse-oriented societies of years ago.
